This course consists of lecture series and seminar, which offers an opportunity integrating architects, urban planners, developers to explore different topics of real estate development together with various aspects.

The lecture series will focus on the main topics of urban development and real estate, such as analyzing trends of the real estate market, offering economic perspectives in various phases of project development, introducing different property types together with different social milieus.

Additional to this lecture series, there is a complementary seminar which allows you to exercise the knowledge which you collect from the lectures. In this semester, we will offer you an opportunity to explore one specific real estate typology from these two: Retail or Hotel. The seminar will guide you through the tasks which you have to accomplish by broadening and deepening the insight of how an evaluation research report is composite at an early project development stage.

In order to acquire 6 Credit Points in total, you must attend both lectures and seminars.

The definition of urban form (street network, plots, building volumes) is a crucial step in the planning of cities because it has the longest lasting effect on their social, economic and ecological performance. Thus, this step needs to be undertaken with greatest care. In this course we will deal with computational methods to support this process. Firstly, you will learn to create parametric models, that allow to quickly generate a large amount of design variants. Secondly, you will get introduced to spatial analysis methods (density, visibility and accessibility) in order to identify different (human centered) qualities of the generated structures.

The knowledge provided through online seminars will be deepened in consultations and documented in several exercises. No prior technical knowledge is required.

At the beginning we will deal with the process of production of scientific knowledge as such considering basic 'rules' of scientific work. As learning by doing is usually a successful way which makes us experiencing the specific demands of a research process you will work in the course in small teams defining and planning your own research project. Starting the practical work we will first deal with different sources of information, how to decode and evaluate them as wells as how to quote and organize them properly in scientific working and writing. Now having an idea how and where to gather information you will define your own research question and develop a research concept step by step going from a proper wording of the research question to the selection of fitting research methods, time planning and documentation.

Over the last 40 years, society and cities in the People's Republic of China have changed dramatically. At the beginning of the 1980s China was still considered a developing country, but today it is one of the world powers whose voice is clearly audible in many parts of the world. Urban and cultural development in the context of architecture and planning show the possibilities and dreams of a society. In the case of China, the realities and constraints of a mass society, which must find its way between individualisation and equality, are also reflected in design, which in turn has an impact on social and political developments. So what does design look like that has to find a way between these poles that takes into account the different conditions in the metropolis and the hinterland?

The seminar provides background information, discusses scenarios and draws a picture of future challenges. But it also asks what can be learned and under what conditions solutions can be exported from China.

Integrated development and design processes require skills to effectively communicate with multiple urban actors, ranging from project stakeholders to citizen audiences. Fundamental knowledge of moderation is an important asset for the work with different interest groups in the urban sphere. The exercise course introduces basic moderation skills to meet today's challenges in the field integrated urban development and design, such as cooperative planning, mediation, and project evaluation. This includes the accurate detection of different interests, strategies for multi-interest decisions, and to work with potentially conflicting positions.

The Model Project Preparatory Course "Reflective Urban Practice" introduces course participants to current trends in urban development and interdisciplinary approaches that target on "good practice" in applied research, practice and administration. With the diverse professional fields existing in the field of urban development and design participants are prepared to streamline their existing experience for the application at a Model Project Partner. The seminar serves as preparation for the application and placement phase prior to the Model Project semester in autumn/winter 2019. The "Model Project" (24 CP) is the praxis semester that takes place world-wide at a selected "Model Project Partner" (offices, institutions, administration) for the purpose of practical training. The internship arrangement (minimum 3 months) is related to urban design, planning, research and development. The training place is either proposed through the programme or the student, and approved through the coordinator of the Model Projects.

Learning Objectives

Besides an introduction to the 'Model Projects Integrated Urban Development and Design' students learn how to link their existing professional experience and interests to a broader field of professional activities related to planning and design. They present and reflect their professional experience. In a second part, the students are coached to further develop their specific interests and communicate them in their professional portfolio and actively take part in the targeted application for the reflective practice semester. First semester students are also attending the Model Project Forum to get first-hand impressions of content and form of different experiences from last semester's Model Projects.

Participation is mandatory for first semester students in Integrated Urban Development and Design - Reflective Urban Practice (IUDD-RUP).

Class based on continuous and active participation.

Green Dreams of Suburbia: Climate Change, Sustainability, the COVID-19 pandemic and Urban Form

Suburbanisierung ist zu einem globalen Trend in der Stadtentwicklung geworden. Angesichts des drohenden Klimawandels, zur Neige gehender Erdölreserven und gleichzeitig noch ansteigendem globalen Energieverbrauch stellt sich jedoch die Frage, ob suburbane Räume mit dem Ziel nachhaltiger Stadtentwicklung vereinbar sind. In dem Seminar wird der Diskussion um Nachhaltigkeit und Stadtstruktur nachgegangen, denn aktuell liegen neue Erkenntnisse zu dieser Thematik vor, die auch Architekten und Städtebauern neue Betätigungsfelder eröffnen. Die aktuelle Corona-Krise wie auch zukünftige Pandemie-Risiken werfen die Fragen auf, ob eine weitere Ballung von Bevölkerungen in ohnehin schon dichten Metropolen sinnvoll ist, ob Strategien der Nachverdichtung nicht (enge) Grenzen zu setzen sind und ob dezentralere Siedlungsstrukturen und geringere urbane Dichte tatsächlich eine Schutzwirkung haben.

engl. Beschreibung

When looking at suburbs, people and planners often see something very different. Whereas the former dream of a better lifestyle, the latter often talk about urban sprawl and point to a long list of negative aspects of this kind of urban form. Particularly in view of rising energy consumption, Peak Oil and possible climate change continuing trends towards global suburbanization have caused concerns. However, more recently the "reading" of suburbs has changed. The prevailing critical discourse has been challenged by the assumption that suburbs – if designed and managed well – can be aligned with the overall goal of sustainability. This includes a reappraisal of "suburbanism as a way of life" that might offer a lot. The seminar will examine the current debate by taking American, Australian, Chinese and German cities as an example. To this end concepts of sustainable urban development will be explored, followed by a practice review. It will be argued that the debate on suburbia is embedded in a much larger, underlying debate on the good life.

The Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic and similar future risks give rise to questions such as: Is urban densification still a good approach in urban planning? Is the global trend towards more and ever larger metropolises healthy and sustainable? Would more decentralized settlement structures and lower urban densities better protect human health, and, in doing so, increase the overall resilience of cities and countries? Or would these strategies, on the contrary, create an abundance of adverse effects?

Bemerkung

Die aktuelle Corona-Krise wie auch zukünftige Pandemie-Risiken werfen die Fragen auf, ob eine weitere Ballung von Bevölkerungen in ohnehin schon dichten Metropolen sinnvoll ist, ob Strategien der Nachverdichtung nicht (enge) Grenzen zu setzen sind und ob dezentralere Siedlungsstrukturen und geringere urbane Dichte tatsächlich eine Schutzwirkung haben.

The European Union is heavily investing in the transformation of the urban environment. This recognizes the key role cities play for realizing, for example, the ambitions of the European Green Deal. Upon closer inspection, broad EU policies are defined by historical, cultural, socio-economic and environmental aspects (among others). This makes EU funds and their use an important subject to debate. What are the current challenges being faced by EU regions? How can EU mechanisms be better integrated, support the goals of sustainable development and create the basis for a more just society? Are critical views being heard and are creative integrated solutions truly being implemented?

Integrated urban strategies will be a focus of the seminar. First a presentation of research results and experience in integrated urban projects funded by the EU, including the theoretical foundation and analytical methods will be presented. Topics such as defining "territorial cohesion" and identifying the urban dimension of EU Cohesion Policy will be presented to exemplify the impact currently happening on the city and state level. Students will undertake their own research on a topic of personal interest related to integrated urban development and compare this to EU strategies. At the end of the seminar students shall be able to navigate EU urban policy, identify the impact of integrated urban strategies and debate on future and creative urban visions.

120223702 GIS Basics for Integrated Urban DevelopmentN.N.

Geographic Information Systems (GIS) are a useful tool for multiple disciplines and user groups. In urban development and planning, different constituencies like local authorities interact through GIS e.g. applying it in environmental agencies, transportation, energy, resource and waste management, retail, disaster management, and socio-economics. Collecting, managing, analysing and visualising data with GIS as an information sharing tool can help in different stages of planning processes – from identifying problems to evaluating different planning proposals. Working with GIS allows to create easy understandable maps and to enable communication processes.

This course introduces different practices and applications of GIS in the wider context of urban development. It suits various users from different backgrounds who are interested in spatial information and mapping. Next to a theoretical insight to GIS, in practical applications participants will learn how to create maps by using ESRI ArcGIS software and get an insight in how experts are using GIS for different purposes related to questions of planning and design. Assignments and short tests have to be accomplished during the exercise based seminar.

Joining the worldwide discussion on the meaning and continuity of post-socialist transformations more than 30 years after the fall of the Berlin Wall, this seminar explores the vulnerable state of modernist heritage in former socialist countries confronted with national memory politics and market forces. At the same time, the seminar seeks to transgress colonial interpretations of "Eastern Europe" and aims to discover empowering artistic practices and strong cultural actors of the region who seek to oppose the disappearance of modernist heritage. By doing so the seminar seeks to examine the negotiation of heritage as a per se multidisciplinary endeavor and invites students of different disciplines to search for, and to develop new ways of cooperation to secure the future of architectural icons.

The seminar will be held online. It will comprise individual and group work as well as input talks from researchers, artists, and activists who are critically engaged in rethinking modernist heritage within the post-socialist context.

120224001 The Future of Urban Tourism

R. Podlaszewska

Veranst. SWS: 2

Seminar

Do, unger. Wo, 09:15 - 12:30, 05.11.2020 - 04.02.2021

Beschreibung

The shift in attitude by city planners towards the tourist industry was prompted by the decline of long-established economic activities and the need of introducing the new ones. This urban dynamic has urged contemporary cities to find a mechanism of upgrading the image of the city through tourism, and the hope that the development of the industry would result in physical as well as social and economic revitalisation of the city. Apart from the, "Central place "paradigm that retains from the thesis of global interconnectedness as the tertiarization of the service economy in urban destinations, the dispute of localisation contributes strongly to the defining of modern urbanisation and the restructuring process. City destinations are keen to adapt to the new forces of globalisation with the references to the favoured attractions all around the world in which tourism, is paradoxically expressed in the language of the locality. As the result of such dichotomy between global and local, the 'locality' has emerged as a new dimension explored and commodified both by planners and industry practitioners.

The seminar therefore would like to suggest alternative concepts that introduce new trajectories, new politics and new policy approaches to enact a transition of hegemonic economy. Concept such as de-growth in urban tourism will be discussed during the semester to indicate multiple facets of place as the palimpsest of social relation and identities. These outcomes are not necessarily permanent, they are temporary in nature and thus constantly oppose the sense of permanence. The influence of local politics and global capital interferes social relation and may generates new spatial outcomes. Coming to the end of the discussion of tourism space definitions, its types, development cycle and transformation, we will be looking for appropriate methods allowing its empirical identification.

Bemerkung

Recently, Covid-19 pandemic has impacted the way people travel and question the future of urban tourism and city planning in general. Students are invited to critically discuss how cities can function to cater such demand of travel and tourism by rethinking of the pedagogy of place and place making will help us pave the way toward a meaningful urban planning.

During the seminar, students will have:

A group presentation (virtual or offline) and lead a discussion with the rest of the class about the city they visited. The guidelines for the "Group work' will be discussed and distributed during the seminar.

Final Assessment to be submitted in the end of the semester: Report on the case studies.

Life in German cities has undergone substantial changes in the last decade. Not only the East German cities had to address new challenges after the reunification of the German nation in 1990, but also the West German cities had to reformulate their place in the complex urban networks. Cities are mirroring wider changes in German society where new social and political developments can be observed. Economic and cultural globalization has had a major impact on many aspects of urban life. This lecture will give an overview about major developments in German cities since the German reunification in 1990. It will provide both a sound source of information on the most important issues of German society and reflect important discussion of the international debate on urban studies. After delivering a historical overview of German cities, basic concepts of urban sociology will be developed by discussing subjects like gentrification, segregation, migration, life style diversity and others. The lecture provides an insight view into classical theories of urban sociology as deriving from Max Weber, Georg Simmel and the Chicago School.
