Establishing the Syrian lab of virtual urban planning

While unbelievable atrocities are committed, it seems to be illusory to already think about reconstructing the Syrian cities.

Historical examples however illustrate that no war went on forever and that sophisticated plans are missing when the reconstruction has to start. Moreover, it is important that the rebuilding of destroyed cities enables processes of reconciliation.
We call for all architects and urban planners from Syria, the Middle East and Germany to contribute with ideas, perspectives and proposals.
