

urbanHist is a multidisciplinary research and training programme run by four universities in Germany, Spain, Slovakia and Sweden and funded within the European Union's Horizon 2020 research and innovation programme in the Marie Skłodowska-Curie Action - Innovative Training Networks (ITN) as European Joint Doctorate (EJD).

urbanHIST aims to develop and sustainably promote a joint understanding of 20th century urbanism in Europe. 15 Early Stage Researchers will be researching in 8 thematic fields, embedded into a network of high-profile academics and practitioners which participate as one of the 13 partner organizations in the project.

The Network-Wide Workshop Week constitutes the start of urbanHIST's research activities. The programme displayed here is the public part of the meeting. The consortium warmly invites interested colleagues and students to participate in the discourses and reflections the approach towards a history of European Urbanism in the 20th Century creates.

The urbanHIST partner organisations are:

20th Centuries European Urbanism – urbanHIST’s Objectives

Throughout the 20th century, urban planning constituted itself as an important tool to spatially direct social developments. This applies to Europe more so than to any other continent. Urban planning contributed significantly to the emergence of the welfare state, strong economies and a relatively balanced settlement structure. However, urban planning also caused the suppression and destruction of some population groups, alongside natural and cultural resources. With the collapse of socialism in 1990, and the increasing importance of the EU, the 20th century ended with a multi-layered convergence in regard to the implementation of urban planning as a regulative and shaping instrument. Most studies on 20th century urban planning adopt a national perspective, while studies aiming to provide an overview focus on several core countries. Furthermore, methodological approaches are very heterogeneous.
