

5 tiny, sounding Loudspeakers are slowly pulled up through the well by motors until they reach the grate. Then they are released and fall freely into the water with a deep, resounding splash. This process repeats itself, with all loudspeakers always in different points in the cycle. The loudspeakers pause for a longer amount of time in the water, but only a few seconds at the grate before they are released.