

DEVICES OF PERCEPTION

A high-angle, fisheye photograph of a group of people gathered around a table in a workshop or classroom. The table is covered with various electronic components, including breadboards, wires, a small motor, and a speaker. A person in the foreground is pointing at a component on the table. In the background, a woman with curly hair is looking on. The scene is brightly lit by natural light from a window.